Our Great Leaders have Fallen!

How can we write the cruel words? Lincoln—our great and good President—is dead! Fallen by the hand of a cowardly traitor and assassin! Stricken down in the very hour of the people's enthusiastic joy over a country preserved and purified through his courage, prudence, faith and wisdom! Martyred in the very arms of those who loved him! The particulars are harrowing. We cannot repeat them. The mournful despatches tell their own dreadful story, and have already drowned a nation in grief. But yesterday full of strength and studying to temper a nation's justice with mercy; to-day—a slaughtered victim to treason's spite—lost to the hope and heart of his age and country! Kings and Emperors have been assassinated before now—some of them good rulers—by desperate or fanatical wretches who obeyed only their own secret impulse; but to slay the beloved head of a free people—himself one of the people and the chosen executor of their will—the man who had just saved the grand experiment of popular government and rid a continent of a monstrous fraud upon human rights—this is a crime unmatched in the annals of the race. It is the great tragedy of history. If anything was lacking before to complete the damnable, eternal infamy of the slaveholders' rebellion, this caps the climax of its infamy. For whether the assassin's accomplices were few or many, or whether he was alone in the terrible crime, it was the legitimate emanation of the fell spirit that cheated four millions of human beings of their humanity, that originated this bloody civil war, that tortured helpless prisoners with every circumstance of cruelty and starved them by thousands, that exhausted the language for words to villify the brave people who were true to their country, and that taught murder was a duty and assassination a virtue. When Lincoln fell under the dastardly blow inspired by the spirit of treason, he was studying how he might pour oil on the wounds of a desolated section. His big, tender heart was offered as a shield between the insurgents and vengeance; and they have drawn its life-drops! He would have saved them, and they have killed him. This will turn the current of popular feeling to a demand for the sternest justice—not against the deluded citizens of the rebellion, but against its arch instigators and the relentless leaders who, amid their people's humiliation and agony still demand more blood.

But Lincoln may not be the only victim. Secretary Seward, whose eloquent logic aroused the Republic to a sense of the moral enormity of the evil that was sapping its vitality—who, by his consummate diplomacy and calm adherence to the strict principles of international law averted the great peril of foreign intervention—he, too, was murderously attacked, while lying sick and helpless in his bed. He also was studying to ameliorate the condition of the insurgents, and to win them back with kindness to their duty to a restored Union. Weakened by previous wounds, it is scarcely possible that he will recover from the assassin's blows. Doubly precious has his life become to the Republic since Lincoln is gone, and there will be universal prayers for its preservation. The imagination is appalled as it contemplates the circumstances of the enormous crime which sought the life of two such men—the wisest and the kindest of our rulers, of whom complaint was never made by any rational creature, except that they were all too kind.

Lincoln's loss is especially serious to the country because it unfortunately happens that the man who must be his constitutional successor has lately manifested his unfitness for the high position to which an awful calamity has called him. Andrew Johnson of Tennessee, elected Vice President, is now President of the United States; and Andrew Johnson lately shamed his countrymen by his maudlin folly while intoxicated. Great Heavens! Must we have a drunkard for the head of this grand Government? His countrymen will hope that the tragedy which elevated will reform him and make him equal to the duties devolved upon him. He has been a brave, true patriot since Rebellion first reared its hateful head, he has suffered in the cause of the Union, and those who have known him long say he has always hitherto, as a Senator of the United States, deported himself with dignity and practiced the virtue of temperance. Let us hope he may do so again, and that his recent lapse was the single offence of a long life against manhood and decency. If he is not the man for the place, we have a Congress that dares to do its duty, and that will not sacrifice the country's character and safety to squeamish sentimentality for a man. Whoever dies, or whoever sins, the Nation must live, and its Government be administered with ability, dignity and conscientiousness. The first duty of the Vice-President, in his new character, will probably be to call an extra session of Congress. That body, on convening, will determine if he meets the emergency, or if it must be met by his impeachment and removal. We speak plainly, for the exigency demands frankness and boldness. The calamity which shrouds the nation in mourning must not unnerve us for the duty that remains, nor be permitted to result in political disaster.

God's Purposes.

The ways of Providence are inscrutable and past finding out. We know God has said that He chasteneth those whom He loveth. We know that He has loved and protected and established our nation in the past, and we believe and trust that He will do so in the future. Why He has permitted this great blow to fall upon us, we cannot certainly know. It may be that Lincoln and Seward stood in the way of the fulfilment of some of His great purposes. It may be that they were so anxious for peace and the reunion of our divided nation, that they would have consented to permit to a certain extent the continuance in the South of that human bondage which He had determined shall be totally eradicated. It may be that they were willing to permit to pass into oblivion the systematic and horrible atrocities so long practised upon our helpless captive soldiers in Southern prisons, while He had determined that such acts should not go unpunished. It may be that had they continued in power, they would have been too merciful, and have forgiven the murders and assassinations of innocent Union men and their families in Texas and all the Border States, while He had determined that the innocent blood that cried to him from the ground should not go unavenged. He may have ordained that the traitors who have lived in our midst, aiding and abetting the sins of our enemies, shall yet receive the reward of their crimes before peace is restored. He may not yet have meted out to our nation the full measure of his wrath for our many National sins and transgressions before the war, so that the end is not yet. He may have seen that we had forgotten Him, and trusted too much in princes and great men, whom we ourselves had set up, and thought that by the strength of our own right arms we had gained a victory over our enemies. If so, how solemnly are we reminded that it is He that hath made us and not we ourselves, and that it is not in the multitude of chariots and horsemen that our safety and success consisted hitherto, but because the Lord kept our cities and permitted not our enemies to prevail over us. He is able now to raise up other and even better men to carry out his purposes than Lincoln and Seward. He will do so. It is well that we are in His hands. Let us humble ourselves in the dust before Him, and trust in His mercy. C. S. C.

The Nation's Only Trust.

God ruled the world before the election of Lincoln without making use of him as an instrument to carry out His wise purposes. He can do so again. The awful dispensation that He hath permitted to befall us, has not shortened His arm nor weakened His mighty hand. We have trusted too much in princes and great men, as we estimate greatness. Let us turn now to the hand that hath smitten us so sorely, and trust that He that hath loved and protected our afflicted nation hitherto, is still able, and will defend and establish it. ***

Proper Precautions.

In view of the excited condition of the public mind, every precaution has been taken by the city authorities to prevent a breach of the peace. Police officers have been specially charged promptly to arrest every person, without distinction, using any language tending to provoke violence. Measures have been taken for closing of bars and drinking saloons during the ensuing 24 hours, by the proprietors themselves, whose good sense in this particular is commendable. An extra large police force will be on duty constantly day and night. Several arrests of violent and treasonable brawlers have been made, and others of their kind may take warning from the above to deport themselves with propriety.

Miscellaneous Items.

Washington, April 14.—President Lincoln and wife, with other friends, this evening visited Ford's Theatre, for the purpose of witnessing the performance of Our American Cousin. It was announced in the papers that Gen. Grant would also be present, but that gentleman took the late train of cars for New Jersey. The theatre was densely crowded, and everybody seemed delighted with the scene before them. During the third act, and while there was a temporary pause for one of the actors to enter, a sharp report of a pistol was heard, which merely attracted attention, but suggested nothing serious, until a man rushed to the front of the President's box, waving a long dagger in his right hand, exclaiming, "Sic semper tyrannis!" and immediately leaped from the box, which was in the second tier, to the stage beneath, and ran across to the opposite side of the stage, making his escape, amid the bewilderment of the audience, from the rear of the theatre, and mounting a horse, fled. The screams of Mrs. Lincoln first disclosed the fact to the audience that the President had been shot, when all present rose to their feet, rushing towards the stage, many exclaiming, "Hang him!" The excitement was of the wildest possible description. Of course there was an abrupt intermission of the performance.

There was a rush towards the President's box, when the cries were heard of "Stand back! Give him air! Has any one stimulants?"

On a hasty examination it was found that the President had been shot through the head, above and at the back of the temporal bone, and that some of the brain was oozing out. He was removed to a private house opposite the theatre. The Surgeon-General of the Army and other surgeons were sent for to attend to his condition.

On an examination of the private box blood was discovered on the back of the cushioned rocking-chair on which the President had been sitting, also on the partition and on the floor. A common single barreled pocket pistol was found on the carpet.

A military guard was placed in front of the private residence to which the President had been conveyed. An immense crowd was in front of it—all deeply anxious to learn the condition of the President. It had been previously announced that the wound was mortal, but all hoped otherwise. The shock to the community was terrible.

At midnight, the Cabinet and Messrs. Sumner, Defey, Farnsworth, Judge Bates, Gov. Oglesby, Gen. Meigs, Col. Hay and a few personal friends, with Surgeon-Gen. Barnes, with his immediate assistants, were around the bed at the side of the President, who was in a state of sincope, totally insensible and breathing slowly. Blood oozed from the wound at the back of his head. The Surgeon-General exhausted every possible effort of medical skill, but all hope was gone. The parting of his family with the dying President was too sad for description.

The President and Mrs. Lincoln did not start for the theatre until fifteen minutes after 8 o'clock. Speaker Colfax was at the White House at the time. The President stated to him that he was going, although Mrs. Lincoln had not been well, because the papers had announced that Gen. Grant was to be present, and as Grant had gone North he did not wish the audience to be disappointed. He went with apparent reluctance, and urged Colfax to go with him, but that gentleman had made other engagements, and with Mr. Ashman of Massachusetts, bade him good-bye.

When the excitement at the theatre was at its widest height, reports were circulated that Secretary Seward had also been assassinated. On reaching this gentleman's residence, a crowd and military guard were around its door. On entering it was ascertained that the reports were based on truth. Everybody there was so excited that scarcely an intelligible word could be gathered. The facts are substantially as follows: About 10 o'clock a man rang the bell, and the call having been answered by a colored servant, he [the caller] said that he had come from Dr. Viede, Secretary Seward's family physician, with a prescription—at the same time holding in his hand a small piece of folded paper, and saying, in answer to a refusal, that he must see the Secretary, as he was entrusted with particular directions concerning the medicine. He insisted on going up, although repeatedly informed that no one could enter the chamber. He pushed the servant to one side and walked heavily towards the Secretary's room, and was met there by Mr. Fred. Seward, of whom he demanded to see the Secretary, making the same representation which he had given to the servant.

What further passed in way of colloquy is not known, but the man struck him on the head with a billy, severely injuring the skull and felling him almost senseless. The assassin then rushed into the chamber and attacked Mr. Seward, the Paymaster of the United States, and Mr. Hunsell, a messenger of the State Department, and two male nurses, disabling them. He then rushed upon the Secretary, who was lying in bed in the same room, and inflicted three stabs in the neck, but severing, it is thought and hoped, no artery, though he bled profusely.

The assassin then rushed down stairs and mounted his horse and rode off before an alarm could be sounded, and in the same manner as at the assassination of the President.

It is believed that the injuries of the Secretary are not fatal, nor those of others, although both the Secretary and Assistant Secretary are very seriously injured.

Secretaries Stanton and Weller, and other prominent officers of the Government called at Mr. Seward's house to inquire into his condition, and there heard of the assassination of the President. They then proceeded to the house where the latter was lying. An immense crowd was gathered in front of the President's house. A strong guard was also stationed there, many persons evidently supposing that he would be brought to his home.

The city to-night presents a scene of the wildest excitement, accompanied by violent expressions of indignation and the profoundest sorrow. Many shed tears.

The military authorities have despatched mounted patrols in every direction, in order, if possible, to arrest the assassins. The whole police are likewise vigilant for the same purpose. The attacks, both at the theatre and at Seward's House took place at about the same hour—10 o'clock—thus showing a preconcerted plan to assassinate those gentlemen. Some evidence of the guilty party who attacked the President are in possession of the Board of Police.

Vice President Johnson is in the city. His headquarters are guarded by troops.

Washington, April 14.—To General Dix—This evening, at about 9:30 P. M., at Ford's Theatre, the President, while sitting in his private box, with Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Harris and Major Rathburne, was shot by an assassin, who suddenly entered the box and approached behind the President. The assassin then leaped upon the stage, brandishing a large dagger, and made his escape in the rear of the theatre. The pistol-ball entered at the back of the President's head and penetrated nearly through the head. The wound is mortal. The President has been insensible ever since it was inflicted, and is now about dying.

About the same hour an assassin—whether the same or not—entered Mr. Seward's apartments, under the pretence of having a prescription, was shown to the Secretary's sick chamber. The assassin immediately rushed to the bed and inflicted two or three stabs in the throat and two in the face. It is hoped that wounds may not be mortal. My apprehension is that they will prove fatal. The nurse alarmed Fred Seward, who was in an adjoining room, and hastened to the door of his father's room, when he met the assassin, who inflicted upon him one or more dangerous wounds, and his recovery is doubtful.

It is not probable that the President will live through the night.

Gen. Grant and wife were invited to be at the theatre this evening, but he started for Burlington at 6 o'clock this evening.

At the Cabinet meeting at which Grant was present, the subject of the state of the country and the prospect of a speedy peace was discussed. The President was very cheerful and hopeful, and spoke very kindly of Gen. Lee and others of the Confederacy, and of the establishment of the Government in Virginia.

All the members of the Cabinet, except Mr. Seward, are now in attendance upon the President.

I have seen Mr. Seward, but he and Fred. were both unconscious. Stanton.

Washington, April 15—4:10 A. M.—The President continues insensible, and is sinking.

Secretary Seward remains without change. Fred Seward's skull is fractured in two places, besides a severe cut on the head. His attendant is still alive, but his case is hopeless.

Maj. Seward's wounds are not dangerous.

It is now ascertained with reasonable certainty that two assassins were engaged in these horrible crimes—Wilkes Booth being the one that shot the President. [Is this the son of Junius Brutus Booth, the actor, and brother to Edwin Booth, and J. B. Booth, lately of the California stage? If so, he is a native of Baltimore. Ed. Bulletin.] and the other a companion of his, whose name is unknown, but whose description is so clear that he can hardly escape. It appears from a letter found in Booth's trunk, that the murder was planned before the 4th of March, but fell through then because his accomplice backed out until Richmond could be heard from. Booth and his accomplice were at a livery stable at 6 o'clock last evening, and left there with horses about 10 o'clock, or shortly after that hour. It would seem that they had been seeking their chance, but for some unknown reason it was not carried into effect until last night. One of them has evidently made his way to Baltimore. The other has not yet been traced.
Edwin M. Stanton.

Chicago, April 15.—President Lincoln died at 22 minutes past 7 o'clock this morning.

Contradictory reports are in circulation in regard to Mr. Seward's condition. So soon as we get anything reliable we will inform you.
Rankin, Agent Associated Press.

War Department, Washington, April 15.—Abraham Lincoln died this morning at 22 minutes after 7 o'clock.
E. M. Stanton,
Secretary of War.

New York, April 15.—The Herald's Goldsboro correspondent says that Sherman's army commenced to advance on the 9th, moving in three columns, under Howard, Slocum and Schofield.

During the rejoicings over the news of Richmond, Sherman was called out by the troops and addressed a few words to them, saying that he was informed that Richmond was captured and Lee flying in dismay. He said that Grant wrote him that he was pursuing Lee, and he hoped that he, Sherman would press Johnston, which, said Sherman, I think we will do." and the soldiers cried, "We will—we will." He told the soldiers that he did not mean to let Johnson have any rest.

Johnston evacuated Raleigh and is moving West, leaving the town in the possession of Hampton's cavalry.

LATEST NEWS.

Hopes of Seward's Recovery.

From the latest despatches received at the Telegraph office before the line stopped working east of Salt Lake—about 1 P. M.—it is believed that hopes are entertained of Mr. Seward's recovery.

Private despatches quote Gold yesterday in New York at 146@145.

Going after the Indians.—The Virginia City Enterprise of 12th April, says:

Capt. A. B. Wells left Fort Churchill yesterday morning with a force of 100 mounted men. He has orders to proceed to Paradise Valley, where he will take the necessary steps to stop the horrid murders which have become so numerous of late in that vicinity. The Captain has a band of noble men, who will fight. They are well armed, well disciplined, and will undoubtedly give satisfaction to settlers as well as give the Indians another whipping, similar to the one they received at Mud Lake. He is to join the command of Lieut. Wolverton at or near Paradise Valley, where he will be will take the whole force of 150 men under his charge.

Killing of Fruit.—The Marysville Appeal of 13th April remarks:

In nearly all sections of Yuba county the apricot crop has been cut off by frost. It is reported that in Brigg's orchard there is not an apricot growing. The peaches and plums have also suffered to some extent—especially the earliest kind. A farmer on the Feather river informed us on yesterday that his peach trees next to the bank were uninjured, while those toward high land were all bitten and killed. The probabilities, however, are that it will be found that the peach trees will produce as large a crop as the prosperity of the tree will justify. If three-quarters of the fruit which set, escapes, there will be plenty of peaches.

An Ingenious Device.—An Irish girl told her forbidden lover she was longing to possess his portrait, and intended to obtain it. "But how if your friends see it?" inquired he. "Ah, but I'll tell the artist not to make it like you, so they won't know it."

FINANCE AND TRADE.

SATURDAY, April 15—P. M.

The dire calamity which has overtaken the Nation fell like a pall upon the mercantile community this forenoon, and brought all pending business transactions to an abrupt pause. The evidences of grief and lamentation over the sad events, were everywhere genuine and heartfelt, and men of all ages and conditions seemed, for the time being, completely unmanned. Mercantile houses were promptly closed; the National emblem was suspended at half mast, and ominous gloom was on all sides apparent. Here and there were to be seen congregated, groups of men solemnly discussing the horrors of the terrible occurrence, and one and all seemed to concur in the sentiment that it is among the heaviest calamities that could have been inflicted upon a nation just emerging from one of the most sanguinary civil strifes recorded in history. All past political differences were lost sight of, and a disposition to pay homage to departed worth was everywhere manifest.

We learn from authentic sources, that travel across the mountains is still interrupted by snow, and the freight charges to Washoe are so high (7c ℔ lb) as to practically preclude any considerable engagements for that section of country. The trade among jobbers, however, bids fair to be kept up to fair proportions by the demand from accessible points in this State and along the coast, until such times as the roads in the interior shall become settled.

In the general Merchandise and Produce markets there has been little or nothing done to-day. Jobbing sales of Flour were made early in the forenoon at prices previously current. Of Barley, 800 sks sold at $3 20, 700 do $3 10@$3 15; and of Oats, 1500 bushels at $2 67½@$2 95. 294 pkgs Japan Tea, (Fan brand,) 10 qr cks Hennessy's Brandy and 1800 cs Downer's Kerosene Oil were sold on private terms—the latter yesterday evening.

We cannot learn that later Gold quotations than the 14th have been received, on which date the rates given in private despatches were 146@145. Business in Legal Tenders to-day has been virtually suspended, and quotations are wholly nominal.

San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15, 1865.

At the morning session the following proceedings took place:

James Smiley offered the following resolution:

WHEREAS, News of the assassination of the President of the United States has been officially received by telegraph from the East, and in view of this great National calamity, be it

Resolved, That this Board immediately adjourn, in respect to the Nation's great loss.

T. H. Holt seconded the resolution and spoke in substance as follows:

Mr. President—It is with a sad heart I rise to second the resolution just offered. In the language of that ...

LOCAL MATTERS.

The Assassination of President Lincoln.

The City in Mourning.

The citizens of San Francisco who went forth from their dwellings this morning into the bright sunlight and beheld still floating from the myriad flagstaffs those bright and beautiful emblems of their country's glory, that had been raised in token of rejoicing at the overthrow of treason and the restoration of Union and brotherhood, little dreamed that before 10 o'clock they would see those banners lowered at half-mast, and draped in mourning, because of the death by assassination of that great and good man whom their countrymen had just reinaugurated as the President of the Republic. It was not strange that the town refused to believe the startling news; that our citizens should say to each other as they met on the public street and in their places of business: "It cannot be possible;" "there must be some mistake;" "they have confounded the President with Secretary Seward, whose death we have been expecting," and other remarks, betraying their incredibility or their positive disbelief in the sad intelligence. But as the sad details of the dark and bloody tragedy enacted in a Washington theatre last night came trembling over the wires from the National Capital, scattering the mournful tidings on the way and putting a whole continent in mourning, our citizens, too, were reluctantly forced into a consciousness of its sad reality, and, bowing their heads to the shock, gave vent to their grief and mingled theirs with the Nation's tears. The outward demonstrations of sorrow that were speedily exhibited in all parts of the city, conveyed but a faint idea of the inward feelings of mingled grief and overwhelming amazement that occupied the minds of our citizens. The assassination of Abraham Lincoln seemed to fall upon the mind and heart of every man and woman in the city like the announcement of the murder of a near and dear friend and relative. Scarcely an eye was unmoistened, and many wept audibly as they read or heard related the details of the assassination.

Business of all kinds was immediately and universally suspended throughout the city. The bells of the City Hall, the engine houses and the churches were all tolled; the Custom-house, the Mint, and all other Government Departments and offices closed their doors; ...

The Contrabans.

Third portion of the Rebel Journals in Richmond the Gazette of Vanuary is perhaps the most interesting of any of the Rebel Journals. The Gazette has a Cairo letter, which is full of information, and is entirely occupied with Dixie. Gen. Grant's movements are discussed, and the Gazette says that the Rebels are now in possession of the entire bank of the Tallahatchie, and that the Rebels are in the rear of Grant's forces. The Gazette says that Grant's forces are now in a very critical position, and that the Rebels will be emboldened enough to make an attack upon the Yankees in the rear, and cut off their supplies, and then Grant will be compelled to surrender. Of the fighting the Gazette says that the Rebels claim to have taken 2,000 prisoners, and that the Yankees have lost 10,000 killed and wounded. The Gazette says that the Rebels have taken a Yankee fort, and that the Yankees have lost 1,000 killed and wounded
